DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR BECAUSE OF DAUGHTER'S DESIRE

Indiana Murderer Had Chance For Commuta-
Wrote Gov. of State.

DESERVED HIS FATE

Michigan City, June 2.—The plea
of Mabel Donovan, 17 years old, that her father be executed for the murder of her mother, was answered at the Indiana State prison here early yesterday when William E. Donovan died in the electric chair.

Donovan's execution climaxed one of the most unusual criminal cases in the history of Indiana.

Donovan died at eight minutes past midnight with a prayer on his lips for forgiveness for the daughter who had destroyed his single chance to escape the electric chair. Just before he went to the chair he had received a letter from his daughter addressed to "Dear Old Dad" and urging him to seek solace in prayer and asking for information about a brother.

Donovan protested his innocence
to the last, contending that his wife Laura, was killed by the accidental discharge of a pistol. He declared his wife had attempted to use the gun against him and that it was discharged when he attempted to wrest
it from her.

Mabel Donovan, the daughter, was an eye witness to the death of her mother. She is now living at Har-rodsburg, Ky.

When the girl heard that her father had applied for a reprieve, she wrote to Governor Warren McCray
of Indiana, asking that the Governor make sure that the father paid the extreme penalty for the crime.

"My mother was surely the best woman that ever lived," she wrote.
"She was shot down with my little baby sister in her arms without any cause whatever. I have seen her beaten, knocked down and mistreated in many ways, since I was old enough to remember. My father was always an overbearing man and had lots of trouble. But he cared for no one but himself, not even us children
and if he could get out he would not be too good to kill us children. In conclusion, I want to say again the sentence given him is surely what he deserves."

Just before his execution, Donovan said he had no bitterness in his heart toward his daughter, for she did not realize what she was doing. He declared she was acting under the influence of a relative of his dead wife.

WILSON TELLS MISSOURI DEMOCRATS TRIUMPH IS UNDOUBTEDLY AT HAND

St. Louis, Missouri, June 2.—Triumph is undoubtedly at hand, Woodrow Wilson said today in a telegram to Missouri voters. The message was addressed to William H. Gruen, who wired the former President asking him to interest himself in getting good Democrats to run for committeemen in St. Louis. Wilson expressed the hope that such candidates could be found and concluded his message by saying that triumph undoubtedly is at hand.

DENIES CHARGES OF UNTERMAYER ATT'Y ABOUT VINTONDALE

President Schwerin of Vinton Collieries Co.
Ready To Carry Case
To High Courts.

GIVES HIS VIEWS

New York, May 31.—C. W. Schwerin, president of the Vinton Colliery company of Vintondale, Pa., defined New York attorneys to "go as far as they like" in pushing charges that they were victims of assault, battery and false arrest while investigating the company's alleged control over free speech and free assembly at Vintondale.

"Mr. Samuel Untermeyer isn't infallible" said Schwerin when he learned that the attorney for the Lockwood legislative committee proposed to aid the American Civil Liberties Union in prosecuting their case.

He denied most of the charges made by Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays, representing the union, who,
with two other attorneys, four members of the United Mine Workers of America and several newspapermen, returned yesterday after their "experiment" at Vintondale.

He denied that the justice of the peace at Vintondale was an employee of the coal company, or that he held
court in the company headquarters,
or that Hays was arrested for "trespassing on company property" when he sought to confer with the justice about his trial on another charge,
as Hays alleges.

"My best advice is that Hays deliberately trespassed," declared Mr.
Schwerin. "If he feels that he has a case, however, and he and Mr. Untermeyer want to take it to the supreme court we'll go there with them.
Whatever means we adopt to keep undesirables out of Vintondale are taken to protect the non-union men
in our mines from the black hand letters, intimidation, dynamite and threatened invasion of the United Mine Workers and we believe the laws of the state of Pennsylvania uphold us in the use of our own police for that purpose."

"If Mr. Hoover or the state of Pennsylvania would send us a few members of the constabulary to patrol the highways, guard our mines
and our men, and keep out undesirables, we could discharge our own police and save a lot of money."

BRADFORD FIRST TO SCORE

John G. Maines, tax collector of Bradford Township, had business at the Commissioner's Office today. He turned over $3000. of County tax for 1922, paid by the taxables of his Township and bore away with him Receipt No. 1 for 1922 taxes, which is a fine record for progressive Bradford.

B. B. Holt, of Central City, Kentucky, who had been attending the conference of coal operators called by Secretary of Commerce Hoover at Washington, D. C., stopped off in Clearfield, enroute home to see his mother, Mrs. A. W. Cowder at her home 20 Nichols street.

Released From Madman's Chains

Mrs. John Jenkins (center) and Miss Kathryn McManan were chained in a pit in a shack near Omaha, Neb., by a madman. H. B. Boyd, going to their rescue, also was chained. While the maniac was disengaging for Boyd, Boyd freed himself and the women.

Is Resting Very Well Although
Bruised And Suffering From Shock After Thrilling Escape
From Being Buried Alive.

George W. Johnson, the Second street plumber, is confined to his home suffering from shock and severe bruises received in an accident which came mighty near resulting in his death.

Mr. Johnson had a crew of men laying a sewer from the residence of
J. C. Meyer, on South Second street through the old fair ground or Reed farm to the river. The ditch in which the sewer pipe was being laid was about 12 feet deep as it neared the river and as the soil was loose and sandy the workmen had a hard time preventing slides and caveins. Mr.

Johnson was working at top speed to get the pipe laid before evening in order that it would not be necessary to "shore up" the sides of the trench
to prevent a cavein. He was being assisted in laying the pipe by Luther Rowles. Suddenly and without warning the sand and gravel near the bottom of the trench caved in and engulfed both men. Mr. Johnson was crouched in the trench with one foot under the sewer pipe while he was making a bed on which to rest the pipe when the rush of dirt came and was securely caught. Rowles, with the assistance of the other workmen on the line, managed to extricate himself.

CATHOLICS FLEE ON TWO OREGON TOWNS BOATS TO ENGLAND DESTROYED BY FIRES TO ESCAPE MURDER IN NEARBY FORESTS

Belfast, Ireland, June 2.—Thousands of Catholics are fleeing from Belfast toward the Free State border.
The welter of blood following the murder of twenty Catholics last week has greatly speeded up the exodus which has been under way for months.
Many of the Catholics are taking boats for England, but it is reported that the youths are hurrying South to join the Republican Army below the boundary.

Portland, Oregon, June 2.—Losses from forest and brush fires which swept the Pacific Coast States during the last three days will probably reach $6,000,000, according to conservative estimates made here. The towns of Cedar Falls and Prineville and several others have been reduced to ashes. Nearly two thousand people are homeless and logging operations which have just started after a period of idleness have been seriously affected.

MAX OSER BRANDED FORTUNE HUNTER BY A CHICAGO COUSIN

Chicago, Ill., June 2.—Max Oser was branded as a fortune hunter by Emil Burge, his Chicago cousin. Burge entered the fight with Edith Rockefeller McCormick against the marriage of her daughter Mathilda to Max Oser, Swiss livery stable proprietor.
It is not Mathilda he wants, Burge declared, but a life of ease.

billion dollar obligation of the Allied nations to the United States, it was learned here today. The Commission

LLOYD REDINGER, OF COOPER TOWNSHIP, DROWNED IN RIVER

Young Man Was Working On N. Y. C. Near Walton and Lost Life
While In Swimming.

BODY BRO T HERE

Lloyd Redinger, aged about 20 years, whose home is in Cooper township at Grassflat, met death by drowning in the Susquehanna river just below Watton station on the River Line of the New York Central railroad.

Redinger was one of a gang of men employed by the railroad company,
who lived in a cabin car near Walton. Last evening after supper five of the men, including Redinger, went in swimming. There is a deep hole in the river at this point which has claimed several victims, and Redinger, who could not swim, got into this hole, where the water is about 12 feet deep. His cries for help when he stepped off into the deep water brought the other four swimmers to his rescue. Two of the men went to Redinger, who was so badly frightened that he frantically clutch-ed hold of them and retarded the effort to rescue him to such an extent that two of the would-be rescuers were themselves nearly exhausted
when they finally managed to elude his grasp, narrowly escaping going to a water grave with Redinger.

The young man's body was recovered and brought to shore shortly after the drowning, but all efforts to resuscitate him were of no avail.
The remains were placed upon a rail road tricycle and brought to Clearfield where they were prepared for burial at the undertaking establishment of F. B. Leavy and shipped to the home of the deceased this morning.

Lloyd Redinger, was a son of the late John and Mary Viehdorfer Redinger. He was born at Grassflat and was aged 20 years, 2 months and 8
days. He is survived by his mother, one brother, and one sister.

The funeral will be held from the Catholic Church at Cooper Settlement
Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment in Cooper Cemetery.

COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAM OUTLINED TONIGHT-SATURDAY

The following activities are planned for the children for this coming Saturday by Clearfield Community Service. The regular morning story telling and game hours will be held this week at St. Francis Parochial School and 3rd Ward School at ten o'clock in the morning. The volunteer game leaders learned a number of new games at the session held by Mel Sheppard last evening, and will have them to teach to the children.

From six to eight Saturday evening
the neighborhood committee in Reeds ville have planned a play party for the children to which the mothers are invited. Mrs. John Bain and her committee have made plans which promise
a very enjoyable time.

The baseball games in the Sunday School league for Saturday include one between the Lutherans and Presbyterians at 5 P. M., in the Intermediate League, and between the Westside Methodists and the Catholics at 10 A. M. by the Juniors.

Mr. John Wood has called a meeting of the committee on Horse Shoe pitching for the High School at 8 o'clock this evening to determine on the details for the tournament. Twenty six entries have been received to date.

AFTER FORTY-SIX HOURS DELIBERATION LONG DRAWN OUT TRIAL COMES TO END

The jury in the Pulci murder case appeared to be determined to give the final disposition of the case as much time and deliberation as was given the trial, which lasted one day more than a week, and made a record for longevity in recent Clearfield county murder trials.

The jury was given the case about 10:40 o'clock on Wednesday morning and were still hard at it trying to reach a verdict this morning.

9 To 3 For Conviction

Grapevine wireles from about the lobby of the Court House claims the jury is standing 9 to 3 for conviction on either second degree or manslaughter and these rumors have it
that this status was reached Wednesday afternoon. Since that time the nine have battered the three with all kinds of legal argument in an effort to swing them around to their
way of thinking and thus end the ordeal which they started to endure on May 23d, and have since given every minute of their time to its consideration.

The three—if rumor is correct—
stand firmly to their guns and refuse to be converted. They appearing to be as firm in their conviction that Pulci violated no law on the day of the killing as the nine jurors are that he is guilty of an unlawful killing.

Send Letter to Judge

The jury sent a communication from the jury room to Judge Bell yesterday just after dinner in which they stated that "we cannot possibly
agree," and asked to be relieved.
Judge Bell answered their communication by informing them that under the laws of Pennsylvania he was powerless to help them by releasing them from further consideration of the case, and that they would have to

Jury Given Cots

Complaint was made about the accommodations or lack of accommodations in the jury room and Judge Bell very promptly initiated the following letter to the County Commissioners
on the subject of accommodations:—
Clearfield, Pa., June 1st, 1922

To the County Commissioners,

Gentlemen:—

There is now serving the Jury in the case of Commonwealth vs. Pulci, who were selected on the 23rd day of May and have been secluded from that time. This Jury retired to begin its deliberations before 11 o'clock A.
M. May 31st and has since that time continuously been confined in the jury room. There is no present prospect of an agreement being reached and it is strongly probable that the Jury will continue for considerable time in their deliberations. All of these men are of mature years and some of them quite advanced in life,
and it seems to the Court that it is wholly improper and almost inhuman that they should be required to remain further in the abominable quarters provided without some steps being taken to alleviate their discomfort. Cots should be promptly provided and placed in the other Jury room to which they have access, so that these men may lie down and get some greatly needed rest. It certainly is not in keeping with our civilization or with the administration of Justice that citizens, who are so unfortunate as to serve as jurors, should be denied these provisions of comfort which are furnished to the lowest criminal.

To this end I direct that cots be obtained and placed in the adjoining Jury room at least before tonight,
to relieve the condition of this Jury.
Kindly take this matter up at once. I may add that I have called the subject verbally to the attention of the County Solicitor, who entirely con-curs in the propriety of this step.

Very truly yours,

SINGLETON BELL, P. J.

The Commissioners got busy at once and a full complement of cots was placed in the jury room last evening.

Verdict of Manslaughter Rendered After a good night's sleep on the new cots provided by the County Commissioners the Pulci jury got up bright and early in a much more amiable frame of mind and after a little verbal preliminaries finally agreed upon a verdict this morning.

This decision was arrived at around about 8:30 and the fact of their agreement communicated to Judge Bell District Attorney Arnold
and A. R. Chase, for the prosecution, and Atty. Gleason of the defense were notified at once. Court called at 9:15 o'clock and a few minutes later the jury filed into the box. After the usual preliminaries the verdict was handed to Clerk of Court Ralston who announced the same, which was
"We find the defendant guilty of manslaughter and recommend him to the mercy of the Court, the county to pay the costs."

New Trial Asked For

Attorney Gleason immediately
made the customary motion for a new trial, which will be argued at a later date. Nothing further can be done in this case until this motion is disposed of by the Court. If a new trial is refused Pulci will then be sentenced.

The case of Com. vs. Sam and Patsy Caramella, in jail, also charged with the killing of Nelo, for which crime Pulci now stands convicted, lingers on the final disposition of motion for a new trial for Pulci. If the same is refused and Pulci sentenced, the killing of Nelo will have been avenged in the eyes of the law, and Messrs Liveright and Miller, attorneys for the Caramellas, will promptly move for the discharge from custody of their clients, which

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 2.—Cheaper
coal was seen here today in the contemplated merger of twenty independent coal companies of the Pan Handle region. The merger, according to information received here will bring all the important producing and undeveloped coal acreage from Pittsburg
to Wheeling under one corporate head
and will result in reducing the price of coal. The coal properties which comprise about 50,000 acres are valued at $40,000,000. Details of the merger are yet to be worked out and a name for the new company selected.
It was rumored here that John A. Bell Pittsburgh banker, would head the new concern.

FIREMEN NET FINE SUM AT FESTIVAL HELD LAST EVENING

III. WIRELESS TELEPHONY

In many ways, all the principles and laws of wireless telephony apply equally well to radio telephony, but, in other ways, there are great differences between the two. In the first place, the vibrations or waves sent out by the wireless telegraph transmitter are interrupted as they are produced by the vibrator of a spark coil and while the flow of the oscillations or waves may be so rapid that they appear as a steady stream, yet there is really a distinct pause after each one.

Fig. 1 Fig. 2 Fig. 3 Fig. 4 Fig. 5 Fig. 6

Fig. 1 represents the variations in vibrations in a certain word. 2, the intermittent oscillations of the wireless telegraph sender and 3, the way the word would be broken and interrupted by being transmitted by means of such interrupted waves. Figure 4, on the other hand, shows the continuous waves of the wireless telegraph transmitter; 5, the sound waves of a word and 6, the way the continuous waves, interrupted by the words would appear. By studying these diagrams you can easily see the difference between the word broken up as in figure 3 and flowing smoothly as in figure 6. It must be borne in mind, however, that whereas the sounds of the voice, of music, etc., cannot be satisfactorily sent or received by wireless telegraph instruments, yet wireless telegrams can be sent to perfection, and can be perfectly received, over wireless telegraph instruments. Indeed, the very best transmitting radiophone sets serve the best for sending telegraphic messages, the only difference being that for the former the continuous high frequency waves are used, whereas, when sending code messages by telegraph, the waves are broken or "chopped" by suitable instruments and a key which opens and closes the circuit.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN ANSWERS LAST CALL

James T. Hebel, 79 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, while accompanying a neighbor, Joseph Lenig from his home in Hunter's Valley to Newport, Perry County, Pa., on Friday morning, May 26, got off the wagon in the narrows, along the steep mountain road to walk up a hill, and while walking along back of the wagon, dropped dead in the road. Death was due to heart failure.

His son, Alfred of Osceola Mills, went to visit him on Monday, May 22, as had been his custom, about every four to six weeks. On Tuesday morning his father suggested that they go to Newport on Wednesday morning, as he wanted to buy a suit hat and shoes to wear to the Memorial services at Liverpool on Sunday, May 28 and on Tuesday, May 30. As planned, they went to Newport on Wednesday morning and after making the purchases, and were about to part to go in different directions to their homes, and as his father said "Good Bye" to his boy he remarked, he would wear his new clothes to the memorial services, neither thinking that the time was so near at hand when he should answer the final "roll call" and be numbered among those whose grave would be strewn with flowers, by his few surviving comrades on that day.

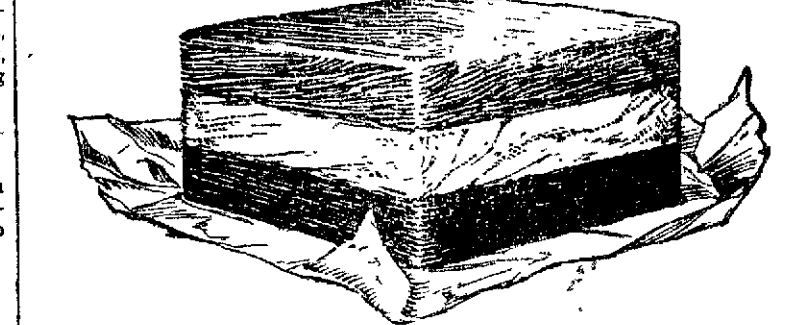

Mr. Hebel was born near Liverpool, Perry County, Pa., March 19th, 1843. He was the son of George and Rosanna (Machet) Hebel, natives of Lancaster and Dauphin Counties. The early part of his life was spent in working as a millwright with his father. He was eighteen years old when the Civil War broke out and at once enlisted in the service of his country in Co. B, 7th Penna. Reserves, being organized at Liverpool by Capt. G. K. Shull and after serving in this regiment and company for some time was transferred to the "Old Bucktails" and at the expiration of his 3 year enlistment re-enlisted, for three years more, or until the close of the war. He took part in nearly all the important battles between the Army of the Potomac and the Confederate forces under command of Robert E.

Lee, from the first battle of Bull Run to Appomattox. Then took part in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C. Then went to Harrisburg where he was honorably discharged from the United States Service, July 5th, 1865, after having served his country over four years, in its most trying hours. He then returned to his home in Perry County, but in December of the same year, came to Clearfield, where he learned the carpenter trade under Ezra Ale. During the spring of 1867 he was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Deis, and moved to Luthersburg, where he followed his trade, farming and lumbering until October 1897 when he was appointed and assumed the position of post master. He resigned that position April, 1906 and moved to Curwensville where his wife died on the 19th of December 1907. He then returned to Perry county and purchased forty acres of land in Hunter's Valley, near the place of his birth, and about midway between Newport and Liverpool, where he lived during the summer and spent the winter with his four surviving children, Alfred M. of Osceola Mills, Mrs. Mary Freedline of Bell Township near Mahaffey, Clearfield County, Pa. Mrs. C. H. Downs of Kansas City, Mo. and Warren L. of Harrisburg, Pa. He is also survived by nine grandchildren.

His body was taken to Osceola Mills to the home of his son Alfred, on Saturday evening at which place funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. W. Shillington of the M. E. Church. On Monday morning the body was taken to Luthersburg where it was laid to rest beside that of his wife and deceased children.

Mr. Hebel was a kind and affectionate father and was dearly loved by his children. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church from the time he first moved to Luthersburg until he returned to Perry County, where he associated himself with the church he attended as a boy and was regular in attendance at services until his advanced age made it almost impossible for him to walk the six miles to the church and back.

"SPRINGTIME" REHEARSALS TO START SOON

"Springtime," a fantasy of mirth and music, will be given under the auspices of the Junior Women's Club, about June 22nd or 23rd, at the Driggs Theatre here, according to an announcement made today. The production will be staged under the personal direction of a professional producer.

The leading musical and dramatic talent in Clearfield is to appear in the various roles and in the dances and choruses. "Springtime" is a musical production of merit. The libretto, music, costumes, scenic equipment, etc., are the property of John B. Rogers Producing Company; and the show will be produced by a representative of that concern. The scenic equipment for the production is far more elaborate than that usually supplied for the ordinary amateur affair, and for splendor closely approaches the metropolitan offerings.

The committee is headed by Helen O'Brien. Rehearsals are expected to begin about June 6th.

sides of the ditch threatening to engulf him at any moment, Mr. Johnson directed the work of the men endeavoring to rescue him. Planks were quickly requisitioned and every effort made to prevent a further cave-in. The efforts of the workmen were unavailing and before they were able to get more than one or two planks into the hole, both sides gave way and a mass of dirt and gravel broke into the trench and covered the imprisoned man to a depth of at least six feet.

When first caught one of Mr. Johnson's arms was pinioned behind his back but when he saw the second slide start he closed the other hand over his nose and mouth and thus, together with the fact that a piece of broken plank in the trench formed a barrier which prevented the dirt from actually covering his face, was all that saved him from death by suffocation.

The other workmen seizing shovels worked with almost superhuman strength to shovel the dirt away and rescue their employer. The ditch being but fourteen inches wide, allowing but two men to work at a time, with the crumbling nature of the material in which they were working, made their task a most difficult one and it was fully ten minutes before Mr. Johnson's head and face were uncovered.

Dr. J. Paul Frantz had been telephoned for when the cave-in occurred.

red and fortunately arrived promptly at the scene. He was at the spot when the unconscious man's face was uncovered and by heroic first aid measures restored him to consciousness in time to save his life. Mr. Johnson had been unconscious for several minutes, his life being saved only by the fact of the small air pocket formed in the dirt by his arm and the piece of plank mentioned, which also kept the dirt and sand out of his mouth and nostrils.

At the time the dirt had been dug away from the upper part of his body an attempt was made to lift Mr. Johnson from the trench but this was found to be impossible, the submerged man then telling his rescuers of his foot being fastened under the pipe at the bottom of the ditch.

After hard labor the trench was cleared and Mr. Johnson released. He was conveyed to his home in Dr. Frantz's automobile, where he quickly recovered but is today suffering from the severe bruises he received by the falling mass of dirt which engulfed him. His head was also badly lacerated by the breaking of the plank, the broken piece of which undoubtedly saved his life.

It was not thought that Mr. Johnson was injured internally and he bids fair to be alright in a few days, although he had a mighty close call.

STIMULANT AIDS SOME HENS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A flock of laying hens in good health has no need for condiments, say poultrymen of the United States Department of Agriculture. A hen whose digestive apparatus is in good working order needs no more stimulation for egg production than is provided by a good, well-balanced ration, proper care and housing. But when hens are off their feed and look dullish a little Jigger of pepper or something of the sort in the ration may cause her to pick up and run on all cylinders again.

Various snappy and pungent condiments are used for the purpose, but the following mixture has been found as good as any and may be made up by the flock owner at low cost: Mix equal parts of ground red pepper, ground allspice, ground ginger and ground cloves, and one-half part of ground fenugreek seed. Many of the "admixtures" sold to flock owners are largely filler and sell for a high price. In the mixture given there is nothing but the essentials. A tablespoonful of the mixture in 2 quarts of moist mash 2 or 3 times a week or a teaspoonful in 1 quart daily should be fed until the birds are back in good order.

It is not good practice for poultrymen to feed these things when the flock is in good appetite. When feed attracts hens little more can be done to stimulate the egg organs.

PASTEURIZATION KILLS BACTERIA

Milk is one of the greatest bacteria carriers that is known to medical science and even the milk from certified cows carries its share of these disease spreading particles.

However, the pasteurization process destroys the germs through the heating of the milk to a certain degree and then quickly lowering this temperature to the point where the bacteria is eliminated.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Sergt. Samuel Joseph, the "most shot up" soldier in all the American Expeditionary Force, has been pierced again—that fine marksman, Dan Cupid, has sent an arrow through his heart. Sergt. Joseph has just married Miss Marcella Baldwin, a nurse in a Lexington hospital, whose affectionate care brought him back to comparative health. He hails from Hazard, Ky., in whose mountains he acquired the hardness which pre-ordained his life. Now he is going back there with his bride. He has learned telegraphy and will become an operator.

Sergt. Joseph fell in the Argonne Forest with 102 shrapnel and machine gun bullet wounds in his body. Surgeons in France and in the United States have performed fifteen operations on him in which about sixty foreign bodies were removed. The surgeons say considerable metal still weights him, but he gets about briskly on his crutches.

Doctors say that new developments of nose, throat and ear disease are caused by the use of denatured alcohol, ether and other astringent drugs in the manufacture of imitation whiskey now being sold in New York. A lot of fellows hereabouts will continue to take a chance however.

We never could quite understand it but glad to have the solution at last. The reason women lavish money and ingenuity on lingerie of fine lace and lovely coloring is because the mere sense of such unseen adornment gives them a feeling of daintiness and beauty that is precious to the feminine heart.

The strange and powerful drug that has drawn explorers into the wilds of Brazil and Bolivia for more than seventy years at last has been discovered. The fact was revealed by Dr. Henry H. Rusby, dean of the College of Pharmacy of Columbia University, and Dr. Orland E. White, curator of plant breeding in the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, who headed the H.

K. Mulford biological expedition that returned recently from South America.

For years Dr. Rusby said, scientists had heard seemingly mythical tales about this drug, which is used by certain South American natives before they enter battle, because it gives them courage. This drug, according to Dr. Rusby, is known as ayawasco by the Indians, and also as ayawasco. A small quantity of it was obtained with difficulty by Dr. White, who said it is a most powerful narcotic, and will be studied to determine whether it has any therapeutic value in medicine.

"The drug is prepared from the root and bark of the ayawasco vine, which grows over the trees, attaining a height of twenty to forty feet. Preparation of the drug is attended by elaborate ceremonial rites, on which women may not gaze. If a woman ever witnesses this ceremony, or partakes of the drug, she is put to death. It is administered only by the tribal cupbearer on the eve of battle. When taken, the drug produces a convulsive trembling, the blood leaves the face and a deathly pallor follows. A few minutes later, however, blood returns to the head and with a superhuman courage that causes the drinker to have no fear of the enemy. Later the drug produces a sleep in which occurs dreams of courageous deeds."

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

CURWENSVILLE

The annual reunion and banquet of the Curwensville High School Alumni Association, held in the Park House Wednesday night, immediately after commencement was one of the most successful and delightful affairs ever held in Curwensville. There was a record breaking attendance, one hundred and thirty-one guests being seated at the banquet table, where the following menu prepared as only Mrs. Fox can prepare, was served:

C. H. S. Croquettes
High School Buttered Peas
Booster Rolls with Butter
Alumni Salad
Graduation Ice Cream
Senior Color Cake
Stay Awake All Night Coffee
When each guest had done ample justice to this delicious collation, tables were cleared and toastmaster R. K. Way launched a program which was the feature of the evening: Orchestra—"The Prima Donna"—

Owing to the lateness of the hour the President was compelled to refrain from calling upon many whom the guests would have liked to hear.

During the "eats" the guests joined with a zest in singing popular airs (from Ginger Jar) and such old fashioned melodies as Jingle Bells, led by Mr. H. P. Kirk. Taken as a whole the banquet passed off with a whoop and hurrah—keeping up the interest with never a dull moment—making it the finest in the history of the alumni.

Too much credit cannot be given the officers and the banquet committee and Landlady Fox for their untiring efforts which made it a decided success.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Clara Michael Layman, Pittsburgh; Prof. and Mrs. H. J. Barrett, Hollidaysburg; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Smeal, Clearfield; Mr. and Mrs. Commodore Everett, Lumber City; Mrs. Richard Hanscom, DuBois; Miss Harriet McCloskey, Clearfield; Miss Helen Ogden, Clearfield; Mr. Lawshe Dorr, Clearfield; Mrs. Gus Comely, Nanty Glo; members of the faculty and elementary teachers of our school.

Mrs. R. K. Way left Thursday for Pittsburgh where she will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Brownlee.

Mrs. Percy Miller of Punxsutawney is the guest of Mrs. W. A. Thompson.

Mrs. Beatrice Conley Appleby is the guest of her parents Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Conley.

Miss Gertrude Erhard, small daughter of Dr. E. S. Erhard entertained about a dozen of her little friends

yesterday afternoon at a party, celebrating her sixth birthday. To say the little folks had a good time goes without saying. They would all like to help her celebrate many birthdays.

Mr. Albert Conley was host to about twenty-five of his friends at the Presbyterian Manse yesterday evening. Games were indulged in after which delicious refreshments were served. The young folks had a delightful time and voted Albert a wonderful host.

ANOTHER SCALP

Woodland A. C. added another game to their string of victories last night by taking the scalp of the Reedsville Indians to the tune of 6-3. This was all they were given as Weiser of Woodland tightened in the second and no further scoring was permitted. Pickles, Rowles and Knepp starred for Woodland. The Woodland A. C. thus far have won every game of the season having but 5 runs scored against them in the total of games. "The Walking Encyclopedia" is the unofficial army title of Marion E. Pollock of the A. E. OLYMPIC CHAMPION SPEAKS AT ROTARY; TELLS EXPERIENCES

Local Club Heartily In Favor of Putting Float In 4th of July Parade Depicting Boy's Work.

BIG ATTENDANCE

The weekly meeting of the Clearfield Rotary Club held at the Hotel Jordan last evening brought out a 90 per cent attendance of the Club members, a fact which caused much favorable comment from President Albert D. Bigler.

After the transaction of the regular business of the Club Dean Bloom reported on the Phillipsburg meeting of Tuesday last, while Dr. Ward O. Wilson and O. B. Porter told of their visit to the Philadelphia Rotary Club last week.

The Club unanimously voted to put a float in the Fourth of July parade. The float will be in charge of the "Boys Work" Committee and will demonstrate the chief activity of the club.

Melville Sheppard, the Olympic champion in 1908 who spent the past two weeks in Clearfield in the interest of National Community Service, and who left for New York today was the guest of the club and delivered a highly interesting talk on influence of athletics; properly supervised play grounds on the youth of the land. Mr. Sheppard is a forceful interesting speaker, his remarks furnishing much food for thought.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Sheppard was asked to recount some of his experiences in scaling the peak of ultimate success or achievement in the whole athletic world. With an analogy for the personal reference and in compliance with the request of the Rotarians Mr. Sheppard gave an intensely interesting sketch of his career since he made his first bid for fame as an athlete on the cinder path at Washington Park, New Jersey, until he stood before America's most strenuous and most forceful President with the laurels of victory over all the best athletes of the world upon his brow, bearing the medals denoting his victory pinned upon his breast by no less a personage than Queen Alexandra of England.

Mr. Sheppard proved to be a highly entertaining raconteur and kept the Rotes in gales of laughter throughout his talk by the humorous situations presented in his references to reception his Irish Athletic Club received in London being mirth producing in the extreme.

President Albert Bigler announced that James P. O'Laughlin, Esq., would be the speaker at next Thursday night's meeting.

TURKEYS LAY EARLY IN DAY

Turkey hens can easily be broken of their broodiness by confining them for two or three days to a coop with a slat bottom. They will mate soon after being let out of the coop and begin laying in about a week. The first two or three eggs of a litter are usually laid at the rate of one every other day, after which the hens ordinarily lay every day until they are broody, although sometimes they skip one day before laying the last egg of a litter.

There is no particular time of day when a turkey hen lays, but most of the eggs are laid in the morning, say poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. The following dates of laying and lengths of time remaining on the nest were obtained by watching a turkey hen during the laying season, and are typical:

Date	Time of laying	Time of leaving nest
March 27	2:30 p. m.	4:00 p. m.
March 28	11:00 a. m.	1:00 p. m.

WATCH FOR INFERTILE EGGS

In Hatching Poultryman Has No Set Rule to Follow in Operating His Incubator.

Poultrymen should test their eggs before putting them under a hen or in an incubator and take out all eggs which are unlikely to produce good chicks. It is not inferred, however, that infertile eggs may be selected out for incubation. There is no known method except by incubation of determining whether an egg is fertile or infertile.

LITTER FOR POULTRY HOUSE

Chaff and Refuse From Hayloft Is Preferred as Seeds Are Most Invigorating.

The best litter for the floor of poultry houses and coops is the chaff and refuse from the hayloft. Hayseeds themselves are small, but invigorating, and much of the benefit derived from them is due to the work induced by the seeds.

Rush after him and tell him he'd forgotten to hear my lessons? Father? Well, I guess not! Besides, it wasn't my fault. I was there all ready. It wasn't my blame that he wasn't there to hear me. But he might remember and come back. Well, if he did, I'd be there. So I went to one of those bookcases and pulled out a touch-me-not book from behind the glass door. Then I sat down and read till the supper bell rang.

Father was five minutes late to supper. I don't know whether he looked at me or not. I didn't dare to look at him—until Aunt Jane said, in her chillest manner:

"I trust your daughter had good lessons, Charles."

I had to look at him then. I just couldn't look anywhere else. So I was looking straight at him when he gave that funny little startled glance into my eyes. And into his eyes then there came the funniest, dearest little understanding twinkle—and I suddenly realized that Father, Father, was laughing with me at his secret between us. But it was only for a second. The next moment his eyes were very grave and looking at Aunt Jane.

"I have no cause to complain of my daughter's lessons today," he said very quietly. Then he glanced over at me again. But I had to look away quick, or I would have laughed right out.

And Mary answered: "Yes, Father," polite and proper, as she should; but Marie inside was just chuckling with the joke of it all.

The next day I watched again at four for Father to come up the walk; and when he had come in I went down to the library. He was there in his pet seat before the fireplace. (Father always sits before the fireplace, whether there's a fire there or not. And sometimes he looks so funny sitting there, staring into those gray ashes just as if it was the liveliest kind of a fire he was watching.)

As I said, he was there, but I had to speak twice before he looked up. Then, for a minute, he stared vaguely.

"I have no cause to complain of my daughter's lessons today," he said very quietly.

"Oh! Ah—er—yes, to be sure," he muttered then. "You have come with your books. Yes, I remember." But there wasn't any twinkle in his eyes, nor the little bit of an understanding smile; and I was disappointed. I had been looking for it. I knew then, when I felt so suddenly lost and heart-achey, that I had been expecting and planning all day on that twinkly understanding smile. You know you feel worse when you've just found a father and then lost him!

And I had lost him. I knew it the minute he sighed and frowned and got up from his seat and said, "Oh, yes, to be sure." He was just Doctor Anderson then—the man who knew all about the stars, and who had been unmarried to Mother, and who called me "Mary" in an of-course-you're-my-daughter tone of voice.

Well, he took my books and heard my lessons, and told me what I was to study next day. He's done that two days now.

Oh, I'm so tired of being Mary! And I've got more than four whole months of it left. I didn't get Mother's letter today. Maybe that's why I'm specially lonesome tonight.

JULY FIRST.

School is done, both the regular school and my school. Not that my school has amounted to much. Really it hasn't. Oh, for three or four days he asked questions quite like just a teacher. Then he got to talking. Sometimes it would be about something in the lessons, sometimes it would be about a star, or the moon. And he'd get so interested that I'd think for a minute that maybe the understanding twinkle would come into his eyes again. But it never did.

Sometimes it wasn't stars and moons, though, that he talked about. It was Boston, and Mother. Yes, he did. He talked a lot about Mother. As I look back at it now, I can see that he did. He asked me all over again what she did, and about the parties, and the folks that came to see her. He asked again about Mr. Harlow, and about the concert, and the young man who played the violin, and what was his name, and how old was he, and did I like him. And then, right in the middle of some question, or rather, right in the middle of some answer I was giving him, he would suddenly remember he was hearing my lessons and he would say, "Come, come, Mary, what has this to do with your lessons?"

Just as if I was to blame! (But, then, we women always get the blame I notice.) And then he'd attend strictly to the books for maybe five whole minutes—before he asked another question about that party, or the violinist.

Naturally the lessons haven't amounted to much, as you can imagine. But the term was nearly finished any way; and my real school is in Boston, of course.

It's vacation now. I do hope that will amount to something!

AUGUST FIRST.

It hasn't, so far—I mean vacation. Really, what a world of disappointment this is! How on earth I'm going to stand being Mary for three months more I don't know. But I've got to, I suppose. I've been here May, June, and July; and that leaves August, September, and October yet to come. And when I think of Mother and Boston and Marie, and the darling good times down there where you're really wanted, I am simply crazy.

If Father wanted me really wanted me, I wouldn't care a bit. I'd be willing to be Mary six whole months. Yes, I'd be glad to. But he doesn't. I'm just here by order of the court. And what can you do when you're nothing but a daughter by order of the court?

Since the lessons have stopped, Father's gone back to his "Good-morning, Mary," and "Good-night," and nothing else, day in and day out. Lately he's got so he hangs around the house an awful lot, too, so I can't even do the things I did the first of the month. I mean that I'd been playing some on the piano, along at the first, after school closed. Aunt Jane was out in the garden a lot, and Father out to the observatory, so I just reveled in piano-playing till I found almost every time I did it that he had come back, and was in the library with the door open. So I don't dare to play now.

And there isn't a blessed thing to do. Oh, I have to sew an hour, and now I have to weed an hour, too, and Aunt Jane tries to have me learn to cook; but Susie (in the kitchen) flatly refused to have me "messing around," so Aunt Jane had to give that up. Susie's the one person Aunt Jane's afraid of, you see. She always threatens to leave if anything goes across her wishes. So Aunt Jane has to be careful. I heard her tell Mrs. Small next door that good hired girls were awfully scarce in Andersonville.

As I said before, if only there was somebody here that wanted me. But there isn't. Of course Father doesn't. That goes without saying. And Aunt Jane doesn't. That goes, too, without saying. Carrie Heywood has gone away for all summer, so I can't have even her, and of course, I wouldn't associate with any of the other girls, even if they would associate with me—which they won't.

That leaves only Mother's letters.

They are dear, and I love them. I don't know what I'd do without them. And yet, sometimes I think maybe they're worse than if I didn't have them. They make me so homesick, and I always cry so after I get them. Still, I know I just couldn't live a minute if it wasn't for Mother's letters.

Besides being so lonesome, there's another thing that worries me, too; and that is, this—what I'm writing. I mean. The novel. It's getting awfully stupid. Nothing happens. Nothing! Of course, if it was just a story I could make up things—lots of them—exciting, interesting things, like having Mother elope with the violinist, and Father shoot him and fall in love with Mother all over again, or else with somebody else and shoot that one's lover. Or maybe somebody'd try to shoot Father, and I'd get love duty in this to save him. Oh, I'd love that!

And that's another thing. About the love story—I'm afraid there isn't going to be one. Anyway, there isn't a bit of a sign of one, yet, unless it's Mother. And of course, I haven't seen her for three months, so I can't say anything about that.

Father doesn't like ladies. I know he doesn't. He always runs away from them. But they don't run away from him! I listen.

Quite a lot of them call here to see Aunt Jane and they come lots of times evenings and late afternoons and I know now why they do it. They come then because they think Father'll be at home at that time, and they want to see him.

I know it now, but I never thought of it till the other day, when I heard our hired girl, Susie, talking about it with Bridget, the Small's hired girl over the fence when I was weeding the garden one day. Then I knew. It was like this:

Mrs. Darling had been over the night before as usual and had stayed on awfully long time talking to Aunt Jane on the front piazza. Father had been there, too, while. She stopped him on his way into the house. I was there and I heard her. She said:

"Oh, Mr. Anderson, I'm so glad I saw you! I wanted to ask your advice about selling poor dear Mr. Darling's law library."

And then she went on to tell him how she'd had an offer, but she wasn't sure whether it was a good one or not. And she told him how highly she prized his opinion and he was a man of such splendid judgment and she felt so alone now with no strong man's shoulder to lean upon and she would be so much obliged if he only would tell her whether he considered that offer a good one or not.

Well as I said, Father hitched and abemmed, and said he didn't know, he was sure, that she'd better take my counsel than his, and that he was very sorry, but she really must excuse him. And he got through the door while he was talking just as fast as he could himself, so that she couldn't get in a single word to keep him. Then he was gone.

Mrs. Darling stayed on the piazza so whole hours longer, but Father never came out at all again.

It was the next morning that Susie said this over the back yard fence to Bridget:

"It does beat all how popular this house is with the ladies—after college hours!"

And Bridget chuckled and answered back:

And she chuckled again, and so did Susie. And then all of a sudden I knew. It was Father Mrs. Darling wanted. They came here to see him. They wanted to marry him. As if I didn't know what Susie and Bridget meant! I'm no child!

But all this doesn't make Father like them. I'm not sure but it makes him dislike them. Anyhow, he won't have anything to do with them. He always runs away over to the observatory, or somewhere and won't see them, and I've heard him say things about them to Aunt Jane, two-words that sound all right, but that don't mean what they say, and everybody knows they don't. So, as I said before, I don't see any chance of Father's having a love story to help out this book—not right away, anyhow.

BOY SCOUT CAMP ON MONTGOMERY CREEK TO OPEN JUNE 12TH

Camp And Its Training Will Be Made Available To Any Boy This Year, Not Scouts Only.

TRAINER IS HERE

'Camp McPherson, the summer camp of Clearfield Council Boy Scouts of America, which is located in a beautiful spot along Montgomery Creek on lands of James A. McPherson, in Pike township, will be opened on Monday, June 12, and continue open during June, July and August.

The camp this year will be in charge of Frank Warren, of Pittsburgh, a man with more than eight years experience in Scout work. This camp is supported by the business men of Clearfield and is maintained for the benefit of the boys of the community.

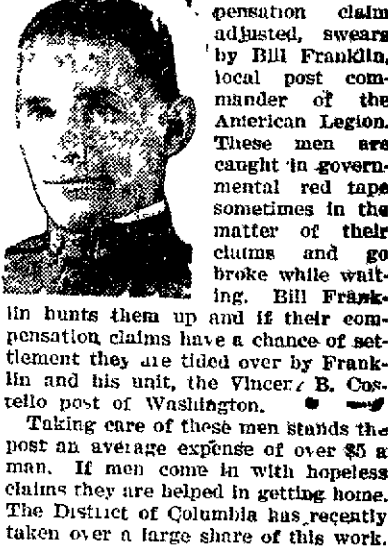

Last year the attendance was limited entirely to Boy Scouts, with the result that many boys did not have the opportunity to avail themselves of the privileges and training of the camp. It will be different this year, as it is the hope of those in the movement to offer the advantages of the camp to all the boys of the town, and accordingly every boy in Clearfield will be eligible to enjoy the camp this year if he and his parents so desire.

The fee charged will be $5 per week and all those who desire to camp and take the training, whether Scouts or not, will do well to hand their names in to any of the following business places about the town: Wm. Should Railway Wages Be Cut?

Investigation Brings to Light Startling Facts About Engineers' Pay

The U. S. Railway Labor Board, now sitting in Chicago, is hearing the spokesmen for the railroads and the various railway labor organizations to determine whether or not working rules should be changed and the wages of these employees further reduced below the 12.2% cut which chopped over $378,000,000 from the railway pay rolls last July.

The question is one of vital interest to the country. Not only the passenger and the shipper, but every citizen who consumes food, wears clothing or gets a letter through the mails has a personal concern in an efficient, dependable and economical transportation service.

The railroads contend that they will gladly reduce rates if they can take the difference out of the wages of their employees. They do not promise that this will insure greater efficiency. On the contrary most of them frankly admit that it will not, since railroad wages are already at a point where many of the best men are leaving the service. The lawyers for the railroads are not stressing the deflation of the section men and unskilled maintenance-of-way employees, whose wages are only about $3 a day, but they assert that the higher paid railway employees, especially the engineers and train service men, should immediately suffer a substantial reduction in pay. Wages of Best Paid Rail Labor Small

In order to secure for our readers the unvarnished truth about the actual wages received by the best paid railway employees, we have just made a survey of the compensation of locomotive engineers, who are sometimes referred to as the "aristocrats of labor", since they are among the railway workers. Obviously, if a cut should not be made in the wages of these men, then the wages of the most poorly paid employees can not be further reduced.

In order to determine whether the engineers are now receiving more than their share of income, we have taken the authoritative figures on wages recently compiled by the U. S. Railroad Labor Board, the data collected by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the rule for determining a "just and reasonable wage" laid down in the Transportation Act passed by Congress in 1920 and still in force. According to the carefully compiled figures of the Railroad Labor Board, the average daily earnings of engineers are as follows:

Passenger engineers$6.00
Yard engineers$6.51
Through freight engineers$7.05
Local freight engineers$7.44

The Labor Board stresses the fact that these are average daily earnings and include overtime as well as regular pay. They represent the total daily compensation received by the average engineer since July 1st, 1921, when Decision No. 147 of the Labor Board imposed a 9.4% cut, totaling $33,822,645 per annum on engine service employees. In the same report there is also given the average monthly wage received by engineers, which indicates that many of them do not work full time. In fact the highest average stated is $185.93 per month, which tapers down to $119.56 for yard and local engineers. As a matter of fact many engineers are now receiving less than this, because the prevalent industrial depression has deprived them of steady employment to the point where they receive but a few days work a week, often with an average income of less than $100 per month. This is far less than the dollar an hour standard compensation paid skilled artisans in practically all of the well organized trades. It is actually less than the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics claims that the average American family must have to maintain a decent standard of living. Cf. Bulletin No. 14 of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

REMEMBERED OLD TEACHER

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Summers in Fourth Ward was the scene of a pleasant gathering last evening, the occasion being a banquet given in honor of F. S. Tomlinson, a former well known Clearfielder who now resides at Aaronburg, Centre County, Pa.

When in Clearfield Mr. Tomlinson was a zealous worker in St. John's Lutheran church and a teacher in the Sunday School. During the present visit to Clearfield, Mr. Tomlinson's class decided to give their old teacher a banquet, and the Summers home was selected as the place to give it. It was a wise selection and the occasion was not only highly enjoyable but one long to be remembered by all those present.

NATURE LOVES BRIGHT COLORS

We see the truth of this statement in the varicolored flowers, the vivid sunsets, the birds of brilliant plumage. But we never see it exemplified more attractively than in the person of a splendidly healthy woman. How does nature paint this health? Why, in the rosy cheeks, the transparent skin, the smooth red lips of such a woman. And she moulds it in firm flesh and rounded contours. The ailing woman is deficient in natural coloring and she does not even appear to advantage in clothes that would set off her more attractive sister. Many women, who long for glowing health, will find that they, too, can have these charms if they will give a trial to that remedy which brings strength to frail women—Lydia E. It Pays To Be Proud of Your Car

Keep it in the pink of condition—not only in good running order, but also in good appearance. An occasional refinishing adds to its life by keeping off the ravages of rust and decay. It also adds to its value when you want to sell.

Right now is a splendid time to have your car freshened up. Perhaps a coat of varnish is all that it needs.

Drive around and let us give you an estimate; or call us on the phone, and we will gladly send an experienced man to advise just what should be done to create that look of newness on your closed or open car.

DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR BECAUSE OF DAUGHTER'S DESIRE

Chance For Commuta-
Wrote Gov. of State.

Michigan City, June 2.—The plea
of Mabel Donovan, 17 years old, that
her father be executed for the murder
of her mother, was answered at the Indiana State prison here early yesterday when William E. Donovan
died in the electric chair.

of the most unusual criminal cases in
the history of Indiana.

Donovan died at eight minutes past
midnight with a prayer on his lips
had destroyed his single chance to escape the electric chair. Just before he went to the chair he had received a letter from his daughter addressed to "Dear Old Dad" and urging him to seek solace in prayer and
brother.

Donovan protested his innocence
to the last, contending that his wife Laura, was killed by the accidental
his wife had attempted to use the
gun against him and that it was discharged when he attempted to wrest
it from her.

Mabel Donovan, the daughter, was
an eye witness to the death of her mother. She is now living at Har-rodsburg, Ky.

When the girl heard that her father
wrote to Governor Warren McCray
of Indiana, asking that the Governor
make sure that the father paid the
extreme penalty for the crime.

"My mother was surely the best
woman that ever lived," she wrote.
"She was shot down with my little
beaten, knocked down and mistreat-
ed in many ways, since I was old
always an overbearing man and had
lots of trouble. But he cared for no
one but himself, not even us children
be too good to kill us children. In conclusion, I want to say again the
deserves."

Just before his execution, Donovan
said he had no bitterness in his heart
toward his daughter, for she did not realize what she was doing. He declared she was acting under the influence of a relative of his dead wife.

President Schwerin of Vinton Collieries Co.
Ready To Carry Case
To High Courts.

New York, May 31.—C. W. Schwerin, president of the Vinton Colliery company of Vintondale, Pa.,
defined New York attorneys to "go
as far as they like" in pushing
assault, battery and false arrest while
investigating the company's alleged
control over free speech and free assembly at Vintondale.

"Mr. Samuel Untermeyer isn't infallible" said Schwerin when he learned that the attorney for the Lockwood legislative committee proposed to aid the American Civil Liberties Union in prosecuting their case.

He denied most of the charges
made by Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays, representing the union, who,
with two other attorneys, four members of the United Mine Workers of America and several newspapermen,
returned yesterday after their "experiment" at Vintondale.

He denied that the justice of the peace at Vintondale was an employee
of the coal company, or that he held
court in the company headquarters,
or that Hays was arrested for "trespassing on company property" when
he sought to confer with the justice
about his trial on another charge,
as Hays alleges.

"My best advice is that Hays deliberately trespassed," declared Mr.
Schwerin. "If he feels that he has a case, however, and he and Mr. Untermeyer want to take it to the supreme court we'll go there with them.
Whatever means we adopt to keep
undesirables out of Vintondale are
taken to protect the non-union men
in our mines from the black hand
letters, intimidation, dynamite and
threatened invasion of the United
laws of the state of Pennsylvania up-
for that purpose."

"If Mr. Hoover or the state of Pennsylvania would send us a few
members of the constabulary to patrol the highways, guard our mines
and our men, and keep out undesirables, we could discharge our own
police and save a lot of money."

From Being Buried Alive.

George W. Johnson, the Second street plumber, is confined to his home suffering from shock and severe bruises received in an accident
which came mighty near resulting in
his death.

Mr. Johnson had a crew of men laying a sewer from the residence of
J. C. Meyer, on South Second street
farm to the river. The ditch in which
the sewer pipe was being laid was
river and as the soil was loose and
preventing slides and caveins. Mr.

get the pipe laid before evening in order that it would not be necessary
to "shore up" the sides of the trench
assisted in laying the pipe by Luther Rowles. Suddenly and without warning the sand and gravel near the bottom of the trench caved in and en-
crouched in the trench with one foot
making a bed on which to rest the
pipe when the rush of dirt came and
was securely caught. Rowles, with
the assistance of the other workmen
on the line, managed to extricate himself.

LLOYD REDINGER, OF COOPER TOWNSHIP, DROWNED IN RIVER

Young Man Was Work-
While In Swimming.

BODY BRO T HERE

Lloyd Redinger, aged about 20
years, whose home is in Cooper township at Grassflat, met death by
just below Watton station on the River Line of the New York Central railroad.

Redinger was one of a gang of men
employed by the railroad company,
who lived in a cabin car near Wal-
ton. Last evening after supper five of the men, including Redinger, went
in swimming. There is a deep hole
claimed several victims, and Redin-
ger, who could not swim, got into
this hole, where the water is about
when he stepped off into the deep
water brought the other four swimmers to his rescue. Two of the men
went to Redinger, who was so badly
frightened that he frantically clutch-
ed hold of them and retarded the effort to rescue him to such an extent
that two of the would-be rescuers
were themselves nearly exhausted
his grasp, narrowly escaping going
to a water grave with Redinger.

The young man's body was re-
covered and brought to shore shortly
after the drowning, but all efforts
to resuscitate him were of no avail.
The remains were placed upon a rail road tricycle and brought to Clear-
field where they were prepared for
burial at the undertaking establishment of F. B. Leavy and shipped to the home of the deceased this morning.

Lloyd Redinger, was a son of the
late John and Mary Viehdorfer Redinger. He was born at Grassflat and
was aged 20 years, 2 months and 8
days. He is survived by his mother,
one brother, and one sister.

The funeral will be held from the Catholic Church at Cooper Settlement
Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment in Cooper Cemetery.

The following activities are planned
for the children for this coming Saturday by Clearfield Community Service. The regular morning story telling and game hours will be held this week at St. Francis Parochial School
and 3rd Ward School at ten o'clock
games at the session held by Mel Sheppard last evening, and will have
them to teach to the children.

From six to eight Saturday evening
the neighborhood committee in Reeds
ville have planned a play party for
the children to which the mothers are
invited. Mrs. John Bain and her committee have made plans which promise
a very enjoyable time.

The baseball games in the Sunday School league for Saturday include
one between the Lutherans and Presbyterians at 5 P. M., in the Intermediate League, and between the Westside Methodists and the Catholics at 10 A. M. by the Juniors.

Mr. John Wood has called a meeting of the committee on Horse Shoe pitch-
this evening to determine on the de-

time and deliberation as was given
the trial, which lasted one day more
longevity in recent Clearfield county
murder trials.

The jury was given the case about 10:40 o'clock on Wednesday morning and were still hard at it trying to reach a verdict this morning.

9 To 3 For Conviction

Grapevine wireles from about the
lobby of the Court House claims the
jury is standing 9 to 3 for conviction on either second degree or manslaughter and these rumors have it
that this status was reached Wednesday afternoon. Since that time
the nine have battered the three with
all kinds of legal argument in an
way of thinking and thus end the
ordeal which they started to endure
on May 23d, and have since given every minute of their time to its consideration.

The three—if rumor is correct—
be as firm in their conviction that
the killing as the nine jurors are that

Send Letter to Judge

The jury sent a communication
from the jury room to Judge Bell
yesterday just after dinner in which
agree," and asked to be relieved.
Judge Bell answered their communication by informing them that under
the laws of Pennsylvania he was
them from further consideration of

Jury Given Cots

Complaint was made about the accommodations or lack of accommodations in the jury room and Judge Bell
very promptly initiated the following letter to the County Commissioners
Clearfield, Pa., June 1st, 1922

To the County Commissioners,

Gentlemen:—
There is now serving the jury in the case of Commonwealth vs. Pulci,
who were selected on the 23rd day
of May and have been secluded from
its deliberations before 11 o'clock A.
M. May 31st and has since that time continuously been confined in the jury
room. There is no present prospect
of an agreement being reached and it is strongly probable that the jury
will continue for considerable
time in their deliberations. All of these men are of mature years and
some of them quite advanced in life,
and it seems to the Court that it is
wholly improper and almost inhuman
that they should be required to re-

main further in the abominable quarters provided without
some steps being taken to alleviate
their discomfort. Cots should be
other jury room to which they have
rest. It certainly is not in keeping with our civilization or with the administration of justice that citizens,
who are so unfortunate as to serve
as jurors, should be denied these provisions of comfort which are furnished to the lowest criminal.

To this end I direct that cots be obtained and placed in the adjoining
jury room at least before tonight,
to relieve the condition of this jury.
Kindly take this matter up at once. I may add that I have called the subject
verbally to the attention of the County Solicitor, who entirely con-
curs in the propriety of this step.

Very truly yours,

SINGLETON BELL, P. J.

The Commissioners got busy at once and a full complement of cots
was placed in the jury room last evening.

Verdict of Manslaughter Rendered
After a good night's sleep on the new cots provided by the County Commissioners the Pulci jury got up
bright and early in a much more amiable frame of mind and after a little verbal preliminaries finally agreed upon a verdict this morning.

This decision was arrived at
around about 8:30 and the fact of
their agreement communicated to Judge Bell District Attorney Arnold
and A. R. Chase, for the prosecution,
and Atty. Gleason of the defense were
o'clock and a few minutes later the
usual preliminaries the verdict was handed to Clerk of Court Ralston
who announced the same, which was
"We find the defendant guilty of
manslaughter and recommend him to
the mercy of the Court, the county to

New Trial Asked For

made the customary motion for a new trial, which will be argued at a later date. Nothing further can be done in this case until this motion is
disposed of by the Court. If a new trial is refused Pulci will then be sentenced.

The case of Com. vs. Sam and Patsy Caramella, in jail, also charged with the killing of Nelo, for
which crime Pulci now stands convicted, hinges on the final disposition of motion for a new trial for Pulci. If the same is refused and Pulci sentenced, the killing of Nelo will have
been avenged in the eyes of the law,
and Messrs Liveright and Miller, attorneys for the Caramellas, will
promptly move for the discharge
from custody of their clients, which

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 2.—Cheaper
coal was seen here today in the contemplated merger of twenty independent coal companies of the Pan Handle region. The merger, according to information received here will bring
all the important producing and un-
developed coal acreage from Pittsburg
to Wheeling under one corporate head
and will result in reducing the price
of coal. The coal properties which comprise about 50,000 acres are valued at $40,000,000. Details of the merger are yet to be worked out and a name for the new company selected.
It was rumored here that John A. Bell Pittsburgh banker, would head the
new concern.

How to Make and Use It By A. HYATT VERRILL

III. WIRELESS TELEPHONY

In many ways, all the principles and laws of wireless telephony apply equally well to radio telephony, but, in other ways, there are great differences between the two. In the first place, the vibrations or waves sent out by the wireless telegraph transmitter are interrupted as they are produced by the vibrator of a spark coil and while the flow of the oscillations or waves may be so rapid that they appear as a steady stream, yet there is really a distinct pause after each one. If a telephone transmitter and receiver were attached to the ordinary wireless instruments used in telephony, the sounds or vibrations of the voice would vary the path of the electrical oscillations and the same variations would be produced on the receiver. But, owing to the fact that the waves are interrupted and are not continuous, the words or sounds would be cut up into sections which would be meaningless, although such sounds as music, bells, whistling, etc., might be recognizable. In fact sounds of this sort frequently have been heard over ordinary wireless telegraph instruments. Hence it is easy to see that the only reason why all sounds cannot be carried through space by ordinary wireless telegraph apparatus is because of the interrupted or broken waves, whereas, if these waves were continuous or were so incredibly rapid as to appear continuous, the sounds they transmitted could easily be heard and understood. Therefore, the real fundamental key to successful wireless telephony lies in producing what are known as continuous waves and it is to the perfection and control of such waves that radio telephony owes much of its rapid advancement.

The accompanying figures, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 illustrate just how the interrupted telegraph currents and the continuous waves carry sounds. Thus 1 represents the variations in vibrations in a certain word. 2, the intermittent oscillations of the wireless telegraph sender and 3, the way the word would be broken and interrupted by being transmitted by means of such interrupted waves. Figure 4, on the other hand, shows the continuous waves of the wireless telegraph transmitter; 5, the sound waves of a word and 6, the way the continuous waves, interrupted by the words would appear. By studying these diagrams you can easily see the difference between the word broken up as in figure 3 and flowing smoothly as in figure 6. It must be borne in mind, however, that whereas the sounds of the voice, of music, etc., cannot be satisfactorily sent or received by wireless telegraph instruments, yet wireless telegrams can be sent to perfection, and can be perfectly received, over wireless telegraph instruments. Indeed, the very best transmitting radiophone sets serve the best for sending telegraphic messages, the only difference being that for the former the continuous high frequency waves are used, whereas, when sending code messages by telegraph, the waves are broken or "chopped" by suitable instruments and a key which opens and closes the circuit.

In using wireless telephony, just as in wireless telegraphy, there must be two separate units known as transmitters and receivers and a transmitter can be used only for sending and a receiver for receiving. As the sending or transmitting apparatus of the wireless telephony is far more complicated than the receiving instruments, as the greatest interest in wireless telephony lies in receiving the messages, songs, etc., sent broadcast from large sending stations, and as the receivers are very simple and easy to understand or to construct, we will put the cart before the horse, so to speak, and consider the receiving end of radio telephony before we take up the sending end.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN ANSWERS LAST CALL

James T. Hebel, 79 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, while accompanying a neighbor, Joseph Lenig from his home in Hunter's Valley to Newport, Perry County, Pa., on Friday morning, May 26, got off the wagon in the narrows, along the steep mountain road to walk up a hill, and while walking along back of the wagon, dropped dead in the road. Death was due to heart failure.

His son, Alfred of Osceola Mills, went to visit him on Monday, May 22, as had been his custom, about every four to six weeks. On Tuesday morning his father suggested that they go to Newport on Wednesday morning, as he wanted to buy a suit hat and shoes to wear to the Memorial services at Liverpool on Sunday, May 28, and on Tuesday, May 30. As planned, they went to Newport on Wednesday morning and after making the purchases, and were about to part to go in different directions to their homes, and as his father said "Good Bye" to his boy he remarked, he would wear his new clothes to the memorial services, neither thinking that the time was so near at hand when he should answer the final "roll call" and be numbered among those whose grave would be strewn with flowers, by his few surviving comrades on that day.

Mr. Hebel was born near Liverpool, Perry County, Pa., March 19th, 1843. He was the son of George and Rosanna (Machet) Hebel, natives of Lancaster and Dauphin Counties. The early part of his life was spent in working as a millwright with his father. He was eighteen years old when the Civil War broke out and at once enlisted in the service of his country in Co. B, 7th Penna. Reserves, being organized at Liverpool by Capt. G. K. Shull and after serving in this regiment and company for some time was transferred to the "Old Bucktails" and at the expiration of his 3 year enlistment re-enlisted, for three years more, or until the close of the war. He took part in nearly all the important battles between the Army of the Potomac and the Confederate forces under command of Robert E.

"Springtime," a fantasy of mirth and music, will be given under the auspices of the Junior Women's Club, about June 22nd or 23rd, at the Driggs Theatre here, according to an announcement made today. The production will be staged under the personal direction of a professional producer.

The leading musical and dramatic talent in Clearfield is to appear in the various roles and in the dances and choruses.

"Springtime" is a musical production of merit. The libretto, music, costumes, scenic equipment, etc., are the property of John B. Rogers Producing Company; and the show will be produced by a representative of that concern. The scenic equipment for the production is far more elaborate than that usually supplied for the ordinary amateur affair, and for splendor closely approaches the metropolitan offerings.

sides of the ditch threatening to engulf him at any moment, Mr. Johnson directed the work of the men endeavoring to rescue him. Planks were quickly requisitioned and every effort made to prevent a further cave-in. The efforts of the workmen were unavailing and before they were able to get more than one or two planks into the hole, both sides gave way and a mass of dirt and gravel broke into the trench and covered the imprisoned man to a depth of at least six feet.

When first caught one of Mr. Johnson's arms was pinioned behind his back but when he saw the second slide start he closed the other hand over his nose and mouth and thus, together with the fact that a piece of broken plank in the trench formed a barrier which prevented the dirt from actually covering his face, was all that saved him from death by suffocation.

The other workmen seizing shovels worked with almost superhuman strength to shovel the dirt away and rescue their employer. The ditch being but fourteen inches wide, allowing but two men to work at a time, with the crumbling nature of the material in which they were working, made their task a most difficult one and it was fully ten minutes before Mr. Johnson's head and face were uncovered.

red and fortunately arrived promptly at the scene. He was at the spot when the unconscious man's face was uncovered and by heroic first aid measures restored him to consciousness in time to save his life. Mr. Johnson had been unconscious for several minutes, his life being saved only by the fact of the small air pocket formed in the dirt by his arm and the piece of plank mentioned, which also kept the dirt and sand out of his mouth and nostrils.

At the time the dirt had been dug away from the upper part of his body an attempt was made to lift Mr. Johnson from the trench but this was found to be impossible, the submerged man then telling his rescuers of his foot being fastened under the pipe at the bottom of the ditch.

After hard labor the trench was cleared and Mr. Johnson released. He was conveyed to his home in Dr. Frantz's automobile, where he quickly recovered but is today suffering from the severe bruises he received by the falling mass of dirt which engulfed him. His head was also badly lacerated by the breaking of the plank, the broken piece of which undoubtedly saved his life.

It was not thought that Mr. Johnson was injured internally and he bids fair to be alright in a few days, although he had a mighty close call.

POULTRY

A flock of laying hens in good health has no need for condiments, say poultrymen of the United States Department of Agriculture. A hen whose digestive apparatus is in good working order needs no more stimulation for egg production than is provided by a good, well-balanced ration, proper care and housing. But when hens are off their feed and look dullish a little Jigger of pepper or something of the sort in the ration may cause her to pick up and run on all cylinders again.

Various snappy and pungent condiments are used for the purpose, but the following mixture has been found as good as any and may be made up by the flock owner at low cost: Mix equal parts of ground red pepper, ground allspice, ground ginger and ground cloves, and one-half part of ground fenugreek seed. Many of the "admixtures" sold to flock owners are largely filler and sell for a high price. In the mixture given there is nothing but the essentials. A tablespoonful of the mixture in 2 quarts of moist mash 2 or 3 times a week or a teaspoonful in 1 quart daily should be

It is not good practice for poultrymen to feed these things when the flock is in good appetite. When feed attracts hens little more can be done to stimulate the egg organs.

PASTEURIZATION KILLS BACTERIA

Milk is one of the greatest bacteria carriers that is known to medical science and even the milk from certified cows carries its share of these disease spreading particles.

However, the pasteurization process destroys the germs through the heating of the milk to a certain degree and then quickly lowering this temperature to the point where the bacteria is eliminated.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Sergt. Samuel Joseph, the "most shot up" soldier in all the American Expeditionary Force, has been pierced again—that fine marksman, Dan Cupid, has sent an arrow through his heart. Sergt. Joseph has just married Miss Marcella Baldwin, a nurse in a Lexington hospital, whose affectionate care brought him back to comparative health. He hails from Hazard, Ky., in whose mountains he acquired the hardness which pre-ordained his life. Now he is going back there with his bride. He has learned telegraphy and will become an operator.

Sergt. Joseph fell in the Argonne Forest with 102 shrapnel and machine gun bullet wounds in his body. Surgeons in France and in the United States have performed fifteen operations on him in which about sixty foreign bodies were removed. The surgeons say considerable metal still weights him, but he gets about briskly on his crutches.

Doctors say that new developments of nose, throat and ear disease are caused by the use of denatured alcohol, ether and other astringent drugs in the manufacture of imitation whiskey now being sold in New York. A lot of fellows hereabouts will continue to take a chance however.

We never could quite understand it but glad to have the solution at last. The reason women lavish money and ingenuity on lingerie of fine lace and lovely coloring is because the mere sense of such unseen adornment gives them a feeling of daintiness and beauty that is precious to the feminine heart.

The strange and powerful drug that has drawn explorers into the wilds of Brazil and Bolivia for more than seventy years at last has been discovered. The fact was revealed by Dr. Henry H. Rusby, dean of the College of Pharmacy of Columbia University, and Dr. Orland E. White, curator of plant breeding in the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, who headed the H.

For years Dr. Rusby said, scientists had heard seemingly mythical tales about this drug, which is used by certain South American natives before they enter battle, because it gives them courage. This drug, according to Dr. Rusby, is known as caapi by the Indians, and also as ayawasco. A small quantity of it was obtained with difficulty by Dr. White, who said it is a most powerful narcotic, and will be studied to determine whether it has any therapeutic value in medicine.

"The drug is prepared from the root and bark of the ayawasco vine, which grows over the trees, attaining a height of twenty to forty feet. Preparation of the drug is attended by elaborate ceremonial rites, on which women may not gaze. If a woman ever witnesses this ceremony, or partakes of the drug, she is put to death. It is administered only by the tribal cupbearer on the eve of battle. When taken, the drug produces a convulsive trembling, the blood leaves the face and a deathly pallor follows. A few minutes later, however, blood returns to the head and with a superhuman courage that causes the drinker to have no fear of the enemy. Later the drug produces a sleep in which occurs dreams of courageous deeds."

A lot of real mean Republican politicians claim that a committee has

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

A "FLIVVER" BOOM

Some prophets are without honor in their own community and others are hailed as presidential timber. Anyway, the Henry Ford presidential boom has been launched, and right in his old home town—Dearborn in Wayne County, Mich.

It is declared to be the precursor of a nation-wide movement; and it has all the earmarks of such, for it was attended by 137 (actual count) of the 911 (estimated population) of the place that Henry made famous, which excusably feels its importance as an influence upon the rest of the American commonwealth and which is pardonably anxious to become still more luminant as producer—using the term in its non-political sense for the moment—of a chief magistrate of the nation.

The meeting in the town hall at which the Ford-for-president club was formed, included a clergyman, a judge, a publisher and a prominent business man. There were represented then, the pulpit, the press, the ebenen, and commerce, and it that does not constitute a national movement right at the start, where was there ever any movement of an all-embracing character?

It is said the platform matter was touched upon only slightly—but why at all? Is't Mr. Ford a sufficient platform unto himself? The voice of this meeting of the neighbors is, as Mr. Beveridge, of Indiana, might say, a mandate that the people of the country dare not disregard.

FAULTS OF THE JURY SYSTEM

Trial by jury now and then brings up the question of the trials of juries. For instance, the jury of his peers which is functioning in the case of Governor Small, of Illinois, who is charged with misuse of state funds when he was state treasurer, has threatened to strike if younger men are not installed in place of the aged bailiffs, who get sleepy and make the jurors go to bed at 9 o'clock. The jurors also complain against being locked in the third-story bedrooms of a non fire-proof court house with no fire escapes. The judge has met one complaint by ordering the Sheriff to provide rope ladders for each window.

The matter suggests humorous comment, but it has a serious side. It is the old question of archaic administration of a system of determining justice that has come down from the days of magna charts—a system that is replete with anomalies which persist in spite of the developments along other lines to meet modern conditions.

As in the case here referred to, the person on trial may be at liberty except when his presence is required in the court room, while the jurors are under constant surveillance, watched over like convicts working on a highway when they are not on active duty and, if they have the sensitiveness of many intelligent human beings, dragged into a state of mind which is certainly not conducive to the exercise of unbiased judgment. It seems to be the natural assumption that, especially in the most important cases, the jurors will be reached and corrupted by interested parties if they are not kept under guard. If the assumption is right, isn't there something radically wrong with the system?

In this country there is a disposition to laugh at the English, whose common law is the basis of our law, for sticking to fossilized institutions and methods. But the English are noted for the speed with which justice is administered through their courts, while one of the gravest complaints in this country is the slowness of justice and the difficulty of convicting criminals of ample resource. A committee of the American Bar Association is now working on a revised code of legal procedure and is to make recommendations for radical reforms to meet glaring evils that have developed. It is not known whether the jury system will receive attention in the reform effort, but the suggestion arises that, while they are about it, some serious consideration might be given to the modernization of that instrument of justice.

THE ANNUAL DELUGE

TO SEND HOME-TOWN PAPER

American Legion and Auxiliary endeavoring to Supply News to Dis-abled Men in Hospitals.

There are 20,000 young Americans who were wounded while fighting during the World war or who have become sick following their service in field and camp, now confined to hospitals over the United States. Most of them are hundreds of thousands of miles from their home town friends and relatives. Many of them can do nothing but read to pass away the time.

The American Legion auxiliary, composed of the wives, mothers and sisters of service men, is endeavoring to have personal, cheerful letters written to these men. Now the Legion is trying to have people in the men's home towns send the home-town newspaper to them, either every day or every week.

There are not more than five or six newspapers sent from any average-sized town in hospitals, the Legion estimates, and asking newspaper editors to send free copies of their papers to their home-town boys in hospital is not asking too much, nor more than citizens would be willing to do. The Legion is forwarding to its officials in each state lists of names of men from that state in hospital and asking that local newspaper editors send their papers to these men. Newspaper editors who are interested, the Legion announces, are asked to signify their willingness and to request lists of names of men from their towns, from national headquarters, Indianapolis, Ind.

Carrying On With the American Legion

The famed "blue devils" of France have been chosen to occupy the Blue land areas now being evacuated by the American forces.

To receive a compensation check for $2,500 on a $270 claim was the experience of David Phillips of Dover, O., an ex-soldier. Phillips returned the $2,500 at once.

Japanese tenants on farms of the Yakima (Wash.) Indian reservation have been ousted in favor of service men, official Washington has informed the American Legion.

Nebraska posts of the Legion will report directly to their state headquarters by radio. They also project community entertainments all over the state by radio.

The aggregate insurance now carried by ex-soldiers on the government war risk policy amounts to $2,500,000,000, according to Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States veterans' bureau.

One year more has been decided upon by congress for the granting of medals for gallantry in the World war. Army officers contend that in deeds of valor by enlisted men have not yet been recognized.

Well to Copy Nature.

The farmer and his family, as well as his stock, accomplish more when carefree and in a happy turn of mind. All nature is fresh and cheerful. It is profitable for us to be likewise!

No one kind of belting will answer every purpose. A high grade rubber belt comes nearer to it than any other. And so we stock a full line of rubber belting in several plies. To take care of the more difficult drives we have also a complete stock of leather belting. And now to supply the demand for something less expensive than either of the above, we have added a line of canvas belts.

CURWENSVILLE

The annual reunion and banquet of the Curwensville High School Alumni Association, held in the Park House Wednesday night, immediately after commencement was one of the most successful and delightful affairs ever held in Curwensville. There was a record breaking attendance, one hundred and thirty-one guests being seated at the banquet table, where the following menu prepared as only Mrs. Fox can prepare, was served:

C. H. S. Croquettes
High School Buttered Peas
Booster Rollers with Butter
Alumni Salad
Graduation Ice Cream
Senior Color Cake
Stay Awake All Night Coffee
When each guest had done ample justice to this delicious collation, tables were cleared and toastmaster R. K. Way launched a program which was the feature of the evening: Orchestra—"The Prima Donna"—

Owing to the lateness of the hour the President was compelled to refrain from calling upon many whom the guests would have liked to hear.

During the "eats" the guests joined with a zest in singing popular airs (from Ginger Jar) and such old fashioned melodies as Jingle Bells, led by Mr. H. P. Kirk. Taken as a whole the banquet passed off with a whoop and hurrah—keeping up the interest with never a dull moment—making it the finest in the history of the alumni.

Too much credit cannot be given the officers and the banquet committee and Landlady Fox for their untiring efforts which made it a decided success.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Clara Michael Layman, Pittsburgh; Prof. and Mrs. H. J. Barrett, Hollidaysburg; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Smeal, Clearfield; Mr. and Mrs. Commodore Everett, Lumber City; Mrs. Richard Hanscom, DuBois; Miss Harriet McCloskey, Clearfield; Miss Helen Ogden, Clearfield; Mr. Lawshe Dorr, Clearfield; Mrs. Gus Comely, Nanty Glo; members of the faculty and elementary teachers of our school.

Mrs. R. K. Way left Thursday for Pittsburgh where she will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Brownlee.

Mrs. Percy Miller of Punxsutawney is the guest of Mrs. W. A. Thompson.

Mrs. Beatrice Conley Appleby is the guest of her parents Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Conley.

Miss Gertrude Erhard, small daughter of Dr. E. S. Erhard entertained about a dozen of her little friends

yesterday afternoon at a party, celebrating her sixth birthday. To say the little folks had a good time goes without saying. They would all like to help her celebrate many birthdays.

Mr. Albert Conley was host to about twenty-five of his friends at the Presbyterian Manse yesterday evening. Games were indulged in after which delicious refreshments were served. The young folks had a delightful time and voted Albert a wonderful host.

WOODLAND A. C. GETS
ANOTHER SCALP

Woodland A. C. added another game to their string of victories last night by taking the scalp of the Reedsville Indians to the tune of 6-3. This was all they were given as Weiser of Woodland tightened in the second and no further scoring was permitted. Pickles, Rowles and Knepp starred for Woodland. The Woodland A. C. thus far have won every game of the season having but 5 runs scored against them in the total of games. Manager Stevens for the club is booking fast attractions for the Saturday games on the home diamond, Woodland. On June 10, the teams plays Hawk Run, and on the 17th, the American Legion Team of Clearfield.

"The Walking Encyclopedia," Unofficial Army Title of Marion E. Pollock of A. E. F.

"The Walking Encyclopedia" is the unofficial army title of Marion E. Pollock of the A. E. F. and the American Legion, now chief of the personnel division of the United States Veterans' bureau in Washington, D. C. Though an enlisted man, Pollock was the admitted expert of the A. E. F. on army paper work, and colonels, and even second lieutenants addressed him with deep respect.

Pollock served in France as chief of the orders division of the adjutant general's department. After the armistice he could quote practically word for word every order issued from general headquarters during the war.

OLYMPIC CHAMPION SPEAKS AT ROTARY; TELLS EXPERIENCES

The weekly meeting of the Clearfield Rotary Club held at the Hotel Jordan last evening brought out a 90 per cent attendance of the Club members, a fact which caused much favorable comment from President Albert D. Bigler.

After the transaction of the regular business of the Club Dean Bloom reported on the Phillipsburg meeting of Tuesday last, while Dr. Ward O. Wilson and O. B. Porter told of their visit to the Philadelphia Rotary Club last week.

The Club unanimously voted to put a float in the Fourth of July parade. The float will be in charge of the "Boys Work" Committee and will demonstrate the chief activity of the club.

Melville Sheppard, the Olympic champion in 1908 who spent the past two weeks in Clearfield in the interest of National Community Service, and who left for New York today was the guest of the club and delivered a highly interesting talk on influence of athletics; properly supervised play grounds on the youth of the land. Mr. Sheppard is a forceful interesting speaker, his remarks furnishing much food for thought.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Sheppard was asked to recount some of his experiences in scaling the peak of ultimate success or achievement in the whole athletic world. With an analogy for the personal reference and in compliance with the request of the Rotarians Mr. Sheppard gave an intensely interesting sketch of his career since he made his first bid for fame as an athlete on the cinder path at Washington Park, New Jersey, until he stood before America's most strenuous and most forceful President with the laurels of victory over all the best athletes of the world upon his brow, bearing the medals denoting his victory pinned upon his breast by no less a personage than Queen Alexandra of England.

Mr. Sheppard proved to be a highly entertaining raconteur and kept the Rotes in gales of laughter throughout his talk by the humorous situations presented in his references to reception his Irish Athletic Club received in London being mirth producing in the extreme.

TURKEYS LAY EARLY IN DAY

Turkey hens can easily be broken of their broodiness by confining them for two or three days to a coop with a slat bottom. They will mate soon after being let out of the coop and begin laying in about a week. The first two or three eggs of a litter are usually laid at the rate of one every other day, after which the hens ordinarily lay every day until they are broody, although sometimes they skip one day before laying the last egg of a litter.

There is no particular time of day when a turkey hen lays, but most of the eggs are laid in the morning, say poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. The following dates of laying and lengths of time remaining on the nest were obtained by watching a turkey hen during the laying season, and are typical:

Date	Time of laying	Time of leaving nest
March 27	2:30 p. m.	4:00 p. m.
March 28	11:00 a. m.	1:00 p. m.

WATCH FOR INFERTILE EGGS

In Hatching Poultryman Has No Set Rule to Follow in Operating His Incubator

Poultrymen should test their eggs before putting them under a hen or in an incubator and take out all eggs which are unlikely to produce good chicks. It is not inferred, however, that infertile eggs may be selected out for incubation. There is no known method except by incubation of determining whether an egg is fertile or infertile.

The best litter for the floor of poultry houses and coops is the chaff and refuse from the hayloft. Hayseeds themselves are small, but invigorating, and much of the benefit derived from them is due to the work induced by the seeds.

MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter

Rush after him and tell him he'd forgotten to hear my lessons? Father? Well, I guess not! Besides, it wasn't my fault. I was there all ready. It wasn't my blame that he wasn't there to hear me. But he might remember and come back. Well, if he did, I'd be there. So I went to one of those bookcases and pulled out a touch-me-not book from behind the glass door. Then I sat down and read till the supper bell rang.

Father was five minutes late to supper. I don't know whether he looked at me or not. I didn't dare to look at him—until Aunt Jane said, in her chillest manner: "I trust your daughter had good lessons, Charles."

I had to look at him then. I just couldn't look anywhere else. So I was looking straight at him when he gave that funny little startled glance into my eyes. And into his eyes then there came the funniest, dearest little understanding twinkle—and I suddenly realized that Father, Father, was laughing with me! He was secret between us. But I was only for a second. The next moment his eyes were very grave and looking at Aunt Jane.

"I have no cause to complain of my daughter's lessons today," he said very quietly. Then he glanced over at me again. But I had to look away quick, or I would have laughed right out.

And Mary answered: "Yes, Father," polite and proper, as she should; but Marie inside was just chuckling with the joke of it all.

The next day I watched again at four for Father to come up the walk; and when he had come in I went down to the library. He was there in his pet seat before the fireplace. (Father always sits before the fireplace, whether there's a fire there or not. And sometimes he looks so funny sitting there, staring into those gray ashes just as if it was the liveliest kind of a fire he was watching.)

As I said, he was there, but I had to speak twice before he looked up. Then, for a minute, he stared vaguely.

"I have no cause to complain of my daughter's lessons today," he said very quietly.

"Oh! Ah—er—yes, to be sure," he muttered then. "You have come with your books. Yes, I remember." But there wasn't any twinkle in his eyes, nor the little bit of an understanding smile; and I was disappointed. I had been looking for it. I knew then, when I felt so suddenly lost and heart-achey, that I had been expecting and planning all day on that twinkly understanding smile. You know you feel worse when you've just found a father and then lost him! And I had lost him. I knew it the minute he sighed and frowned and got up from his seat and said, "Oh, yes, to be sure." He was just Doctor Anderson then—the man who knew all about the stars, and who had been unmarried to Mother, and who called me "Mary" in an of-course-you're-my-daughter tone of voice.

Well, he took my books and heard my lessons, and told me what I was to study next day. He's done that two days now.

Oh, I'm so tired of being Mary! And I've got more than four whole months of it left. I didn't get Mother's letter today. Maybe that's why I'm specially lonesome tonight.

School is done, both the regular school and my school. Not that my school has amounted to much. Really it hasn't. Oh, for three or four days he asked questions quite like just a teacher. Then he got to talking. Sometimes it would be about something in the lessons, sometimes it would be about a star, or the moon. And he'd get so interested that I'd think for a minute that maybe the understanding twinkle would come into his eyes again. But it never did.

Sometimes it wasn't stars and moons, though, that he talked about. It was Boston, and Mother. Yes, he did. He talked a lot about Mother. As I look back at it now, I can see that he did. He asked me all over again what she did, and about the parties, and the folks that came to see her. He asked again about Mr. Harlow, and about the concert, and the young man who played the violin, and what was his name, and how old was he, and did I like him. And then, right in the middle of some question, or rather, right in the middle of some answer I was giving him, he would suddenly remember he was hearing my lessons and he would say, "Come, come, Mary, what has this to do with your lessons?"

Just as if I was to blame! (But, then, we women always get the blame I notice.) And then he'd attend strictly to the books for maybe five whole minutes—before he asked another question about that party, or the violinist.

Naturally the lessons haven't amounted to much, as you can imagine. But the term was nearly finished any way; and my real school is in Boston, of course.

It's vacation now. I do hope that will amount to something!

AUGUST FIRST.

It hasn't, so far—I mean vacation. Really, what a world of disappointment this is! How on earth I'm going to stand being Mary for three months more I don't know. But I've got to, I suppose. I've been here May, June, and July; and that leaves August, September, and October yet to come. And when I think of Mother and Boston and Marie, and the darling good times down there where you're really wanted, I am simply crazy.

If Father wanted me really wanted me, I wouldn't care a bit. I'd be willing to be Mary six whole months. Yes, I'd be glad to. But he doesn't. I'm

Since the lessons have stopped, Father's gone back to his "Good-morning, Mary," and "Good-night," and nothing else, day in and day out. Lately he's got so he hangs around the house an awful lot, too, so I can't even do the things I did the first of the month. I mean that I'd been playing some on the piano, along at the first, after school closed. Aunt Jane was out in the garden a lot, and Father out to the observatory, so I just reveled in piano-playing till I found almost every time I did it that he had come back, and was in the library with the door open. So I don't dare to play now.

And there isn't a blessed thing to do. Oh, I have to sew an hour, and now I have to weed an hour, too, and Aunt Jane tries to have me learn to cook; but Susie (in the kitchen) flatly refused to have me "messing around," so Aunt Jane had to give that up. Susie's the one person Aunt Jane's afraid of, you see. She always threatens to leave if anything goes across her wishes. So Aunt Jane has to be careful. I heard her tell Mrs. Small next door that good hired girls were awfully scarce in Andersonville.

As I said before, if only there was somebody here that wanted me. But there isn't. Of course Father doesn't. That goes without saying. And Aunt Jane doesn't. That goes, too, without saying. Carrie Heywood has gone away for all summer, so I can't have even her, and of course, I wouldn't associate with any of the other girls, even if they would associate with me—which they won't.

They are dear, and I love them. I don't know what I'd do without them. And yet, sometimes I think maybe they're worse than if I didn't have them. They make me so homesick, and I always cry so after I get them. Still, I know I just couldn't live a minute if it wasn't for Mother's letters.

Besides being so lonesome that's another thing that worries me, too; and that is, this—what I'm writing. I mean. The novel. It's getting awfully stupid. Nothing happens. Nothing! Of course, if it was just a story I could make up things—lots of them—exciting, interesting things, like having Mother elope with the violinist, and Father shoot him and fall in love with Mother all over again, or else with somebody else and shoot that one's lover. Or maybe somebody'd try to shoot Father, and I'd get love duty in this time to save him. Oh, I'd love that!

And that's another thing. About the love story—I'm afraid there isn't going to be one. Anyway, there isn't a bit of a sign of one, yet, unless it's Mother. And of course, I haven't seen her for three months, so I can't say anything about that.

Father doesn't like ladies. I know he doesn't. He always runs away from them. But they don't run away from him! I listen.

Quite a lot of them call here to see Aunt Jane and they come lots of times evenings and late afternoons and I know now why they do it. They come then because they think Father'll be at home at that time, and they want to see him.

I know it now, but I never thought of it till the other day, when I heard our hired girl, Susie, talking about it with Bridget, the Smalls' hired girl over the fence when I was weeding the garden one day. Then I knew. It was like this:

Mrs. Darling had been over the night before as usual and had stayed on awfully long time talking to Aunt Jane on the front piazza. Father had been there, too, while. She stopped him on his way into the house. I was there and I heard her. She said: "Oh, Mr. Anderson, I'm so glad I saw you! I wanted to ask your advice about selling poor dear Mr. Darling's law library."

And then she went on to tell him how she'd had an offer but she wasn't sure whether it was a good one or not. And she told him how highly she prized his opinion and he was a man of such splendid judgment and she felt so alone now with no strong man's shoulder to lean upon and she would be so much obliged if he only would tell her whether he considered that offer a good one or not.

Well as I said Father hitched and abemmed, and said he didn't know, he was sure, that she'd better take my counsel than his; and that he was very sorry, but she really must excuse him. And he let through the door while he was talking just as fast as he could himself, so that she couldn't get in a single word to keep him. Then he was gone.

Mrs. Darling stayed on the piazza so whole hours longer but Father never came out at all again.

It was the next morning that Susie said this over the back yard fence to Bridget:

And Bridget chuckled and answered back:

And she chuckled again, and so did Susie. And then all of a sudden I knew. It was Father Mrs. Darling wanted. They came here to see him. They wanted to marry him. As if I didn't know what Susie and Bridget meant! I'm no child!

But all this doesn't make Father like them. I'm not sure but it makes him dislike them. Anyhow, he won't have anything to do with them. He always runs away over to the observatory, or somewhere and won't see them, and I've heard him say things about them to Aunt Jane, two-words that sound all right, but that don't mean what they say, and everybody knows they don't. So, as I said before, I don't see any chance of Father's having a love story to help out this book—not right away, anyhow.

BOY SCOUT CAMP ON MONTGOMERY CREEK TO OPEN JUNE 12TH

Camp And Its Training Will Be Made Available To Any Boy This Year, Not Scouts Only.

TRAINER IS HERE

Camp McPherson, the summer camp of Clearfield Council Boy Scouts of America, which is located in a beautiful spot along Montgomery Creek on lands of James A. McPherson, in Pike township, will be opened on Monday, June 12, and continue open during June, July and August.

The camp this year will be in charge of Frank Warren, of Pittsburgh, a man with more than eight years experience in Scout work. This camp is supported by the business men of Clearfield and is maintained for the benefit of the boys of the community.

Last year the attendance was limited entirely to Boy Scouts, with the result that many boys did not have the opportunity to avail themselves of the privileges and training of the camp. It will be different this year, as it is the hope of those in the movement to offer the advantages of the camp to all the boys of the town, and accordingly every boy in Clearfield will be eligible to enjoy the camp this year if he and his parents so desire.

The fee charged will be $5 per week and all those who desire to camp and take the training, whether Scouts or not, will do well to hand their names in to any of the following business places about the town: Wm. M. Boyce & Son, Shaw Bros., Walker & Loy, Dale's Store, Dale & Barger, Overly Bros., Bloom's Drug Store, Stewart's Drug Store, Virginia Chocolate Shop or Y. M. C. A.

AIDS STRANDED EX-SOLDIERS

Bill Franklin, Washington (D. C.) Post Commander, Assists Men Seeking Claim Adjustments.

Every stranded ex-soldier who drifts into Washington D. C., in hope of getting a compensation claim adjusted, swears by Bill Franklin, local post commander of the American Legion. These men are caught in governmental red tape sometimes in the matter of their claims and go broke while waiting.

Bill Franklin hunts them up and if their compensation claims have a chance of settlement they are aided over by Franklin and his unit, the Vincoer B. Costello post of Washington.

Taking care of those men stands the post an average expense of over $5 a man. If men come in with hopeless claims they are helped in getting home. The District of Columbia has recently taken over a large share of this work.

Should Railway Wages Be Cut?

The U. S. Railway Labor Board, now sitting in Chicago, is hearing the spokesmen for the railroads and the various railway labor organizations to determine whether or not working rules should be changed and the wages of these employees further reduced below the 12.2% cut which chopped over $378,000,000 from the railway pay rolls last July.

The question is one of vital interest to the country. Not only the passenger and the shipper, but every citizen who consumes food, wears clothing or gets a letter through the mails has a personal concern in an efficient, dependable and economical transportation service.

The railroads contend that they will gladly reduce rates if they can take the difference out of the wages of their employees. They do not promise that this will insure greater efficiency. On the contrary most of them frankly admit that it will not, since railroad wages are already at a point where many of the best men are leaving the service. The lawyers for the railroads are not stressing the deflation of the section men and unskilled maintenance-of-way employees, whose wages are only about $3 a day, but they assert that the higher paid railway employees, especially the engineers and train service men, should immediately suffer a substantial reduction in pay. Wages of Best Paid Rail Labor Small

In order to secure for our readers the unvarnished truth about the actual wages received by the best paid railway employees, we have just made a survey of the compensation of locomotive engineers, who are sometimes referred to as the "aristocrats of labor", since they are among the railway workers. Obviously, if a cut should not be made in the wages of these men, then the wages of the most poorly paid employees can not be further reduced.

In order to determine whether the engineers are now receiving more than their share of income, we have taken the authoritative figures on wages recently compiled by the U. S. Railroad Labor Board, the data collected by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the rule for determining a "just and reasonable wage" laid down in the Transportation Act passed by Congress in 1920 and still in force. According to the carefully compiled figures of the Railroad Labor Board, the average daily earnings of engineers are as follows:

Yard engineers$6.51
Through freight engineers$7.05
Local freight engineers$7.44

The Labor Board stresses the fact that these are average daily earnings and include overtime as well as regular pay. They represent the total daily compensation received by the average engineer since July 1st, 1921, when Decision No. 147 of the Labor Board imposed a 9.4% cut, totaling $33,822,645 per annum on engine service employees. In the same report there is also given the average monthly wage received by engineers, which indicates that many of them do not work full time. In fact the highest average stated is $185.93 per month, which tapers down to $119.56 for yard and local engineers. As a matter of fact many engineers are now receiving less than this, because the prevalent industrial depression has deprived them of steady employment to the point where they receive but a few days work a week, often with an average income of less than $100 per month. This is far less than the dollar an hour standard compensation paid skilled artisans in practically all of the well organized trades. It is actually less than the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics claims that the average American family must have to maintain a decent standard of living. Cf. Bulletin No. 14 of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Summers in Fourth Ward was the scene of a pleasant gathering last evening, the occasion being a banquet given in honor of F. S. Tomlinson, a former well known Clearfielder who now resides at Aaronburg, Centre County, Pa.

When in Clearfield Mr. Tomlinson was a zealous worker in St. John's Lutheran church and a teacher in the Sunday School. During the present visit to Clearfield, Mr. Tomlinson's class decided to give their old teacher a banquet, and the Summers home was selected as the place to give it. It was a wise selection and the occasion was not only highly enjoyable but one long to be remembered by all those present.

NATURE LOVES BRIGHT COLORS

We see the truth of this statement in the varicolored flowers, the vivid sunsets, the birds of brilliant plumage. But we never see it exemplified more attractively than in the person of a splendidly healthy woman. How does nature paint this health? Why, in the rosy cheeks, the transparent skin, the smooth red lips of such a woman. And she moulds it in firm flesh and rounded contours. The ailing woman is deficient in natural coloring and she does not even appear to advantage in clothes that would set off her more attractive sister. Many women, who long for glowing health, will find that they, too, can have these charms if they will give a trial to that remedy which brings strength to frail women—Lydia E.
